DETECTION OF NETWORK MISCONFIGURATIONS

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system includes a communication network having any number of separately addressable elements. An analysis device can test packet data paths between these elements by eliciting particular traffic patterns. For example, the analysis device may 5   elicit similar traffic patterns in both forward and reverse communications with a remote element and analyze these communications to detect network misconfigurations.